Hi James,

Thanks for your email. As you know, we received a claim of alleged rights infringement regarding the removed content. Per Facebook's Statement of Rights and Responsibilities, users are prohibited from posting infringing content on the site.

If you believe that we have made a mistake in removing this content, then please contact the complaining party directly with the following information to resolve your issue:

Notice #: [254591191]
Contact Information:
Name - [Jules Dervaes]
Email - [dervaes@dervaesinstitute.com]

If both parties agree to restore the reported content, please ask the complaining party to contact us via email with a copy of the agreement so that we can refer to the original issue. We will not be able to restore this content to Facebook unless we receive explicit notice of consent from the complaining party.

Thanks for contacting Facebook,

Subject: Web page disabled

Facebook,

We received notice last night that our fan page for Denver Urban Homesteading is disabled due to copyright violation.

This website is about our indoor farmers' market, and all the messages I send to the readers are my own words promoting the market and the vendors.

All the photos I post are photos of my own homestead or of the products that we sell in the market with all pictures taken on our property.

It is inconceivable that we have violated any copyright laws.

Please help us understand what has happened and how we can get to use this page again.

Thank you.

James Bertini
